2007 Assembly Election Results

1 Introduction

This paper gives a summary of the results, votes, shares and turnout at the third Assembly election, on 3 May 2007. The Members' Research Service intends to produce a fuller paper in the near future showing a number of other elements of the results, including pages on the main parties' showings at the election, more details on constituencies in relation to regional votes, and more details on candidates.

The electoral system

The electoral system in Wales is known as the Additional Member System. The Assembly has sixty elected members and each voter has two votes. The first vote is used to elect a local or constituency Assembly Member using the First Past the Post system. Forty Assembly Members are elected on this basis, one from each constituency.

The second vote is used to elect twenty additional members, on a regional basis, to try to ensure that the overall number of seats for each political party reflects their share of the vote. The d'Hondt formula is used for deciding which parties win regional list seats.

For further details, please refer to the Members' Research Service paper 'National Assembly for Wales Election 2007'<sup>1</sup>, which provides an overview of the electoral system, electoral law, and preparations for the 3 May 2007 election. The fuller research paper on the election will also include worked examples of the d'Hondt formula.

Data sources for 2007

The election statistics shown in this paper have been compiled from data provided by each local authority. The electorate figures are Office for National Statistics figures for 1 December 2006, which will be updated when official results for Election Day are available.

This paper includes comparisons of the 2007 results with positions after the 2003 Assembly election. There was a by-election in Blaenau Gwent in 2006, the results of which have not been included in the main analyses. See section four for more details.

Boundary changes

A review by the Boundary Commission for Wales introduced changes to the boundaries of Assembly constituencies and electoral regions that were first used for this Assembly election. Due to the boundary changes in some areas, notional figures must be used when comparing election results from 2003 and 2007. These notional results, compiled by professors Colin Rallings and Michael Thrasher of Plymouth University, take the figures from the 2003 election and apply them to the new boundaries. Where comparisons with 2003 are made in this paper, there is a note to indicate whether actual 2003 results, notional 2003 results, or both have been used.

See section four (sources and notes) for further information on: data sources; changes to constituency boundaries; the Blaenau Gwent by-election; and party codes.

2 Summary

This section provides a high level summary of the results of the 2007 Assembly election. Further details are shown in the reference tables in section three, and a more in-depth analysis of these and other statistics will be included in an update to this research paper.

- Labour won twenty-six of the seats in the Assembly, four fewer than in 2003, and two fewer than in 1999.
- Plaid Cymru won fifteen of the seats, gaining three compared with 2003, but two fewer than the seventeen they won at the 1999 election.
- The Conservatives won twelve seats, one more than in 2003, and three more than in 1999.
- The Liberal Democrats won six seats, the same as in 2003 and 1999.
- Trish Law (People's Voice) was re-elected as the AM for Blaenau Gwent, having originally won the seat (originally held by Labour) in the 2006 by-election.

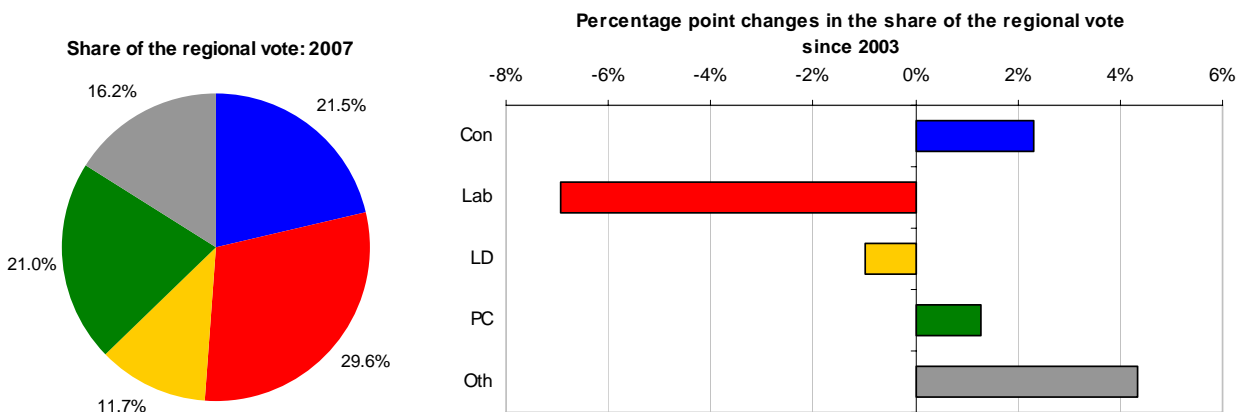

The overall share of the constituency vote, and changes since 2003 by party are shown below.

- Labour secured the highest share: nearly one third of the total vote. Labour was the only one of the four major parties to experience a decrease (of nearly 8 percentage points) in its share of the vote compared to 2003.
- The Conservatives and Plaid Cymru both gained just over 22 per cent of the total vote. The Conservatives increased their share by 2.4 percentage points, twice the increase seen by Plaid Cymru.
- The Liberal Democrats saw a small increase of 0.6 percentage points since 2003 in their 15 per cent share of the vote.
- As a whole, minor parties and independent candidates account for over 8 per cent of the vote, an increase of 3.5 percentage points on 2003.

The overall share of the regional vote, and changes since 2003 by party are shown below.

- As a whole, minor parties and independent candidates gained over 16 per cent of the regional vote, nearly double the share secured in the constituency ballot.
- The major parties saw a similar change in share of the vote since 2003 as in the constituency ballot, except for the Liberal Democrats who saw a decrease of 1 per cent in their regional share.

Seats changing hands (notional results)

Seven constituency seats and four regional seats changed hands between the 2003 and 2007 Assembly elections (using notional results for 2003), as shown below.

Safe and marginal constituency seats

By percentage majority (the majority divided by the total number of valid votes cast):

Constituency		1st	2nd	Majority	% majority
Safest
1	Dwyfor Meirionnydd	PC  Con 		8,868	40.1%
2	Ogmore	LAB  PC 		7,900	34.7%
3	Aberavon	LAB  PC 		6,571	32.0%
4	Cardiff Central	LD  Lab 		6,565	29.3%
Most marginal
1	Vale of Glamorgan	Lab  Con 		83	0.2%
2	Carmarthen West and South Pembrokeshire	Con  Lab 		98	0.3%
3	Vale of Clwyd	Lab  Con 		92	0.4%
4	Delyn	Lab  Con 		511	2.4%

Three constituency seats were won by a majority of over thirty per cent, and Cardiff Central by just under thirty per cent, as shown above. All of these seats were won by the same party as in 2003 (using the notional result for the new constituency of Dwyfor Meirionnydd).

Four constituency seats were won by a majority of under three per cent. All four seats were held by Labour following the 2003 election, and all except Carmarthen West & South Pembrokeshire (now held by the Conservatives) remain as Labour seats.

Assembly Members

A full list of elected Assembly Members (AMs) is provided in section 3.

Of the sixty elected AMs, twenty-eight are women and thirty-two men, compared to thirty of each after the 2003 election. The first AM from a minority ethnic group, Mohammad Asghar, was elected on the regional list for South Wales East.

Fifty-six of the second Assembly's AMs stood as candidates at the third Assembly election: forty-seven were re-elected and nine were defeated. The elected AM for Aberconwy - Gareth Jones - was an AM in the first Assembly; the remaining twelve newly elected AMs have no previous Assembly experience.

Turnout

The definition of turnout used in this paper is the valid votes cast as a percentage of the electorate. Please see section four for further notes on turnout and electorate data.

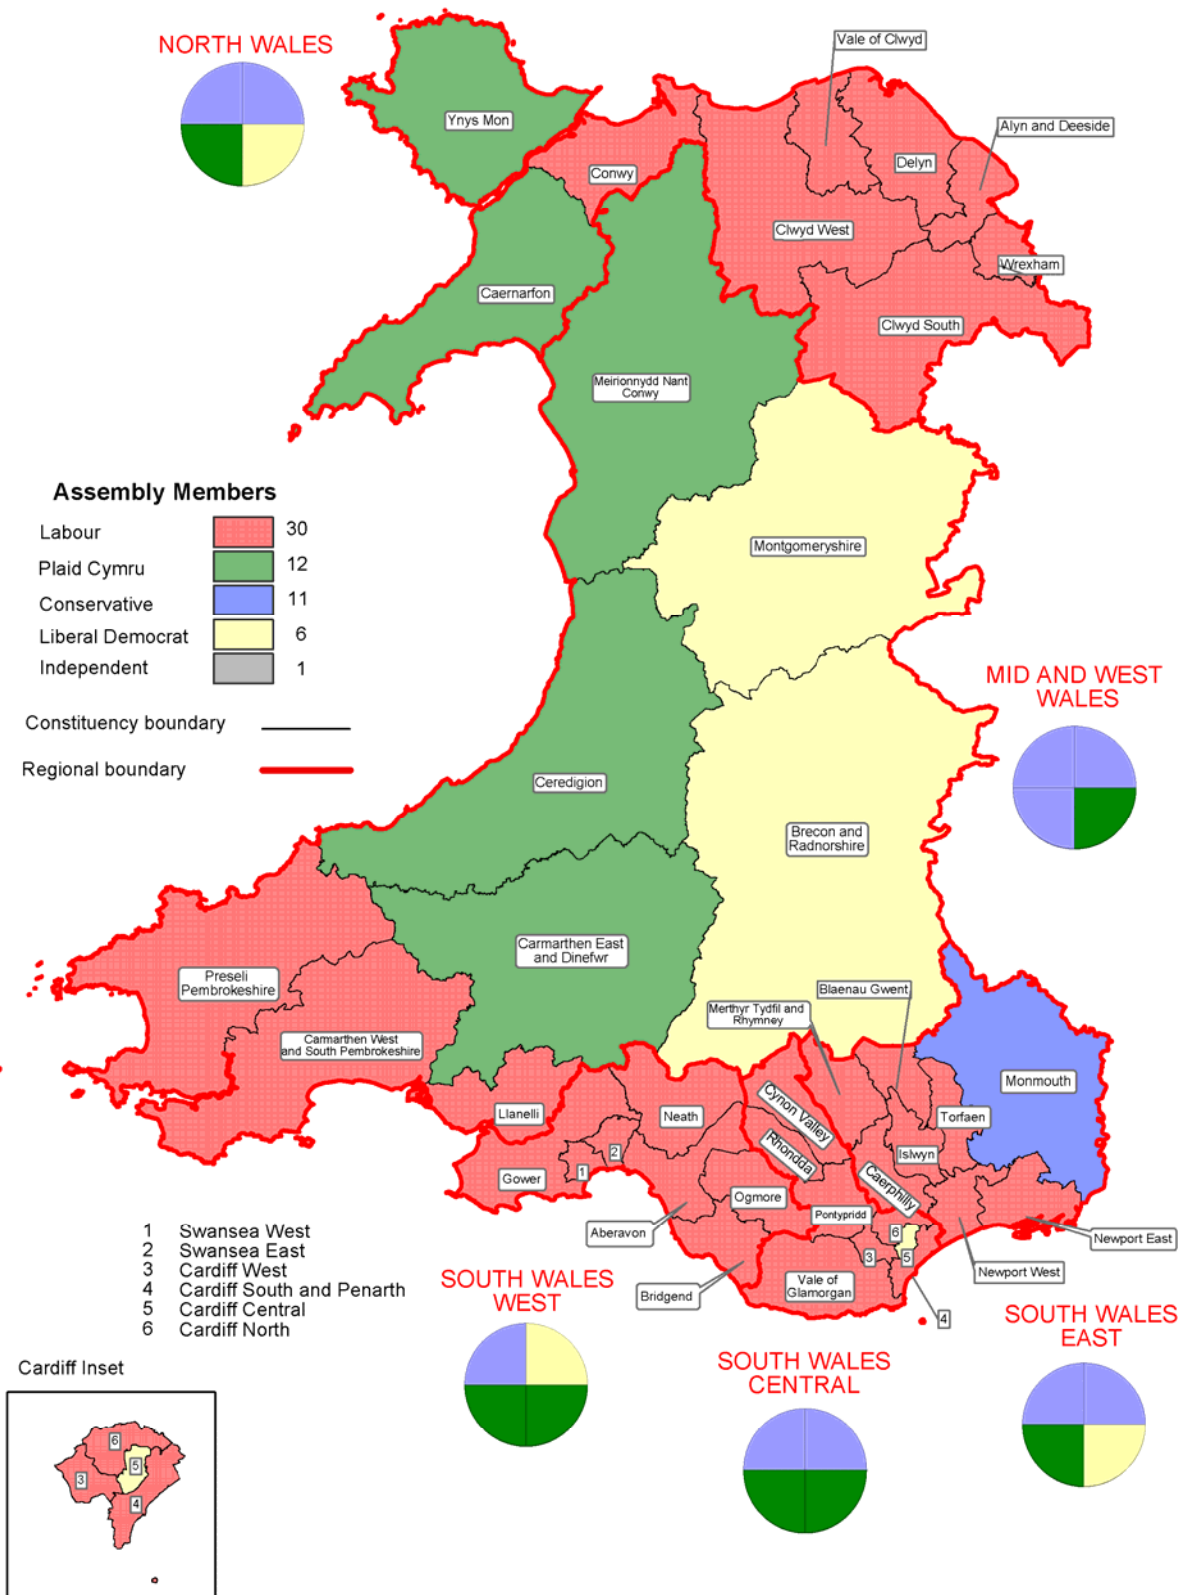

At the 2007 election, turnout for the constituency ballot was 43.4 per cent, over five percentage points higher than that in 2003 (38.2 per cent), and less than three percentage points lower than that in 1999 (46.3 per cent), as shown below. Turnout for the regional ballot was similar at 43.2 per cent.

Election	Year	% Turnout
National Assembly for Wales	1999	46
Welsh Local Government	1999	49
European Elections (Wales)	1999	28
UK General Election (Wales)	2001	62
National Assembly for Wales	2003	38
Welsh Local Government	2004	42
European Elections (Wales)	2004	42
UK General Election (Wales)	2005	62
National Assembly for Wales	2007	43

In the constituency ballot, six of the forty constituencies saw a turnout of over 50 per cent. Turnout was generally highest in Mid and West Wales (over 45 per cent in all constituencies) and lowest in South Wales West (less than 45 per cent in all constituencies). Turnout ranged from 35 per cent in Swansea East to 55 per cent in Ceredigion.

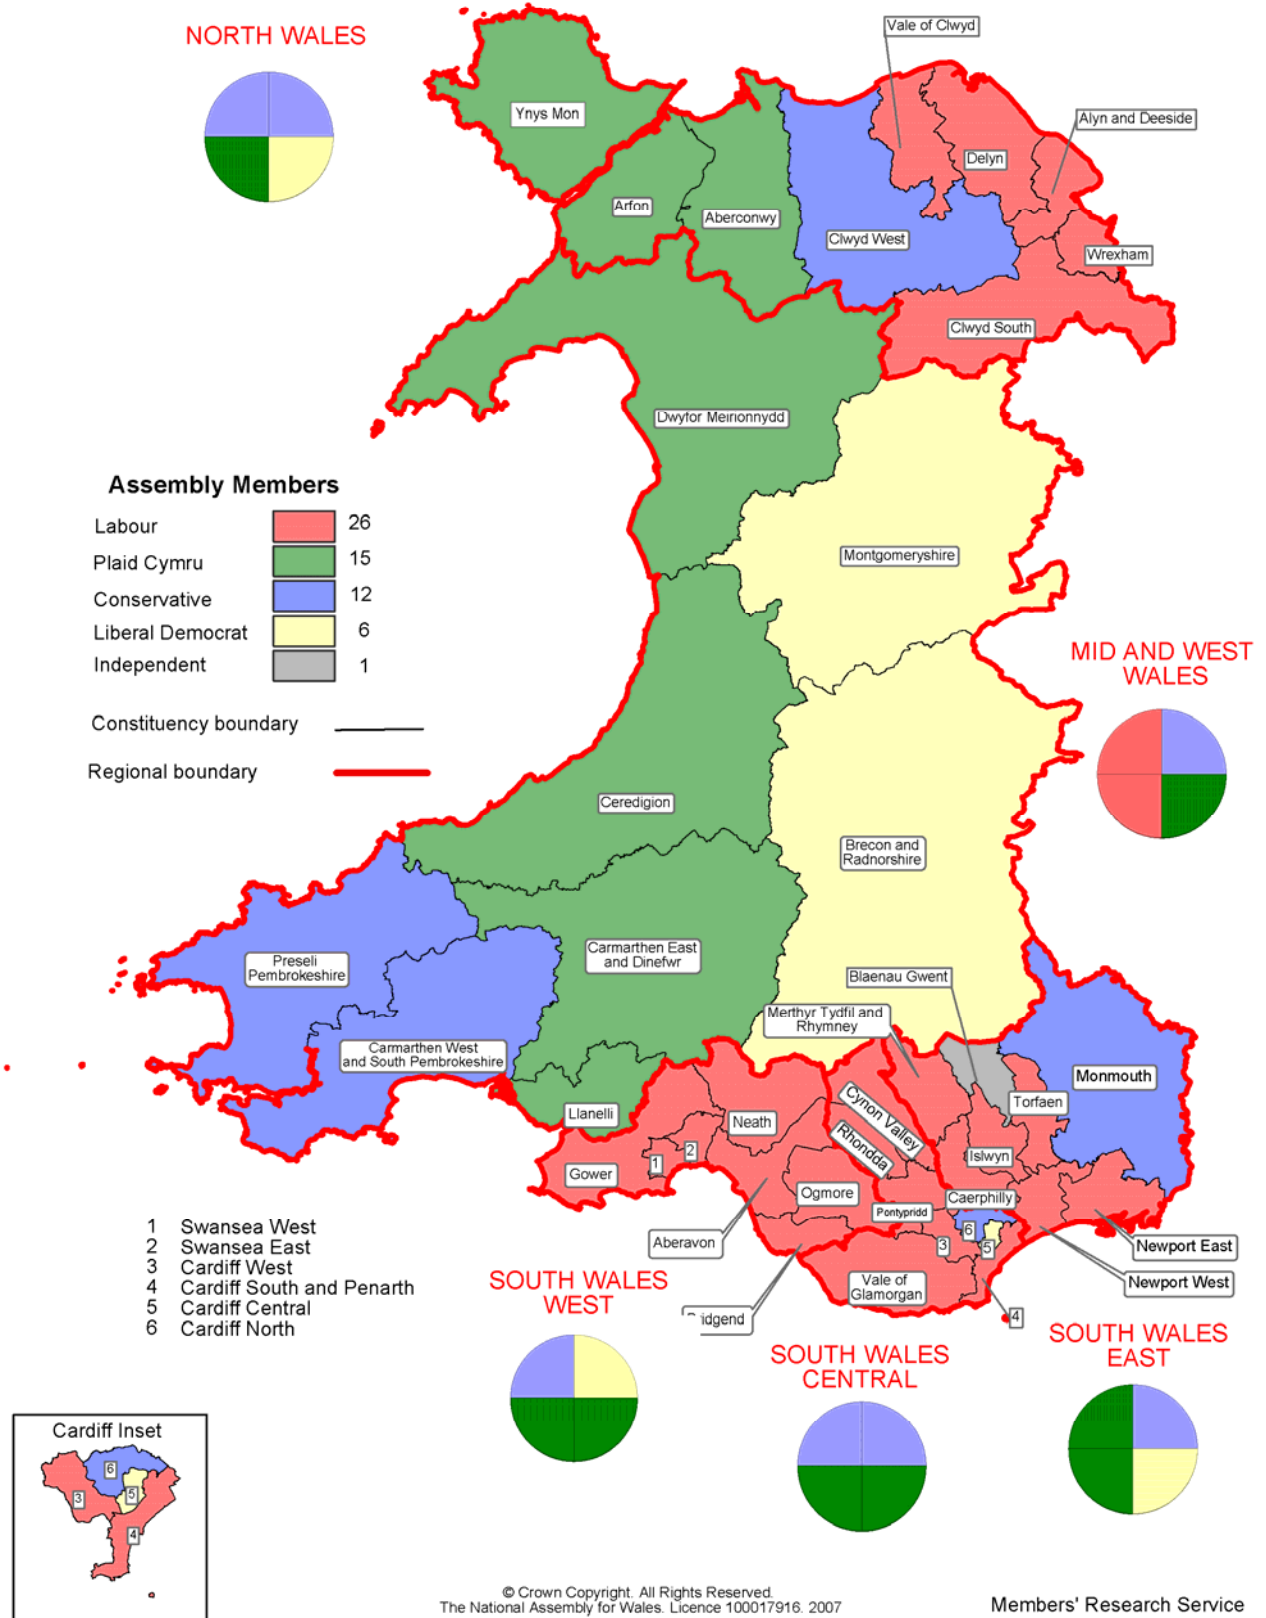

Only two constituencies experienced a decrease in turnout since 2003: Pontypridd (-1.1 percentage points) and Rhondda (-3.2 percentage points). Alyn & Deeside and Delyn constituencies both saw an increase of over 10 percentage points in turnout.

4 Sources and Notes

Changes to constituency boundaries

A review by the Boundary Commission for Wales introduced changes to the boundaries of Assembly constituencies and Assembly electoral regions that were first used for the 2007 Assembly election. (The changes will not take effect for UK parliamentary constituencies in Wales until the next General election.)

The biggest changes occur in north Wales, with the creation of three new constituencies (Aberconwy, Arfon, and Dwyfor Meirionnydd) in place of the constituencies of Conwy, Caernarfon and Meirionnydd Nant Conwy. The North Wales and Mid and West Wales regions have been redefined to reflect the changes to constituency boundaries.

For further details and a summary of all changes, see the research paper<sup>2</sup> on the new constituencies recently produced by the Members' Research Service.

Data sources - votes

Where available, the number of votes cast for each party in 2007 is taken from the website of the relevant local authority. This information has been validated against the BBC website.

Due to the boundary changes described above, it is only possible to compare election results from 2003 and 2007 for the affected areas by using notional figures. These notional results, compiled by professors Colin Rallings and Michael Thrasher of Plymouth University, take the figures from the 2003 election and apply them to the new boundaries. Some areas<sup>3</sup> have not been affected by boundary changes, where this is the case, the original election results from 2003 have been retained.

The differences between actual and notional 2003 election results are as follows: the old constituency Conwy was won by Labour in 2003, but according to notional results the new constituency Aberconwy would have been won by Plaid Cymru; Plaid Cymru won a regional seat in North Wales in 2003, but according to the notional results this seat would have been won by the Conservatives. The net difference between notional and actual 2003 results is that Labour would have had one seat less and the Conservatives one seat more.

For Wales as a whole, comparisons may be based upon either actual or notional results. At the Wales level, the notional share of the 2003 vote for each party is the same as the actual share, but the notional number of seats per party may differ from the actual number of seats. Where comparisons with 2003 are made in this paper, there is a note to indicate whether actual 2003 results, notional 2003 results, or both have been used.

Other historical election results used in this paper are based on official results provide by the Electoral Commission through their website<sup>4</sup>.

Data sources – electorate and turnout

Few local authorities have provided figures for their constituencies' electorate yet, and due to problems with the reliability of media reports of electorates, Office for National Statistics data as at 1 December 2006<sup>5</sup> has been used for this paper. These will be updated when official results for Election Day are available. Turnout has been calculated as valid votes as a percentage of the electorate. Spoilt ballots are not included in the calculation.

Blaenau Gwent by-election

A by-election was held for the constituency of Blaenau Gwent on 29 June 2006 following the death of Assembly Member (AM) Peter Law on 25 April 2006. Mr Law was elected as the Labour AM for Blaenau Gwent in 2003. In the 2005 General Election, Mr Law stood as an independent Parliamentary candidate. In 2006 Trish Law (Mr Law's widow) won the Assembly by-election as an independent candidate.

Tables and charts in this paper compare the 2007 results with positions after the 2003 Assembly election rather than after the 2006 by-election. The table below shows the percentage share of valid Blaenau Gwent constituency votes cast, by party, for all three elections.
